IQ Test Answer: He opens his mouth and says, "I would like to buy a pair of sunglasses."

Run 2087 – Chez Batsey – Wart & Masterbates

Tradition says that last week's Hare will scribe the next weeks run.
So with that direction in my mind, I wrote about this one.
My recollection's hazy; maybe booze or age,
But here we go, the Hash Report written on one page.

I guess some hashers turned up to Run two thousand, eighty-eight,
Held in far off Kirwan; no distance is too great.
Hared by WART and MASTERBATES; athlete and weather fucker,
WART's trail would have been perfect; guess Master cooked the tucker.

I bet the circle took an age; interjections from a few.
Prick and Erectus would have gone to some deserving two.
No doubt charges from the floor; some innocent on ice,
Followed by a lovely nosh, apparently quite nice.

Anyway that's all from me, my memory let me down.
For how am I to write about the other side of town,
With Martinis in the afternoon, and FRESH FANNY all aglow,
All I can remember is I didn't even go!!

One-question IQ Test:

There is a mute who wants to buy a toothbrush. By imitating the action of brushing one's teeth, he successfully expresses himself to the shopkeeper and the purchase is done.

Now if there is a blind man who wishes to buy a pair of sunglasses, how should he express himself?

(The answer is on the bottom of the front page.)

The Tomato Company

An unemployed man is desperate to support his family of a wife and three kids. He applies for a janitor's job at a large firm and easily passes an aptitude test.

The human resources manager tells him, "You will be hired at minimum wage of $5.35 an hour. Let me have your email address so that we can get you in the loop. Our system will automatically email you all the forms and advise you when to start and where to report on your first day."

Taken back, the man protests that he is poor and has neither a computer nor an email address.

To this the manager replies, "You must understand that to a company like ours that means that you virtually do not exist. Without an email address you can hardly expect to be employed by a high-tech firm. Good day."

Stunned, the man leaves. Not knowing where to turn and having $10 in his wallet, he walks past a farmers' market and sees a stand selling 20kg crates of beautiful red tomatoes. He buys a crate, carries it to a busy corner and displays the tomatoes. In less than 2 hours he sells all the tomatoes and makes 100% profit. Repeating the process several times more that day, he ends up with almost $100 and arrives home that night with several bags of groceries for his family.

During the night he decides to repeat the tomato business the next day. By the end of the week he is getting up early every day and working into the night. He multiplies his profits quickly.

Early in the second week he acquires a cart to transport several boxes of tomatoes at a time, but before a month is up he sells it to buy an old ute.

At the end of a year he owns three old trucks. His two sons have left their neighbourhood gangs to help him, his wife is buying the tomatoes, and his daughter is taking night courses so she can keep books for him.

By the end of the second year he has a dozen very nice used trucks and employs fifteen people.

Time passes and at the end of the fifth year he owns a fleet of trucks, a warehouse, plus two tomato farms. The tomato company's payroll has put hundreds of homeless and jobless people to work. His daughter reports that the business grossed over one million dollars.

Planning for the future, he decides to buy some life insurance. He picks an insurance plan to fit his new circumstances. Then the adviser asks him for his email address to send the final documents to.

When the man replies that he doesn't have time to mess with a computer and has no email address, the insurance man is stunned. "What, you don't have email? No computer? No Internet? Just think where you would be today if you'd had all of that five years ago!"

"Ha!" he snorts. "If I'd had email five years ago I'd be sweeping floors at Microsoft for $5.35 an hour."
