Run 2157 – El Dringo & HJ60

The pack was greeted at the abode of our Mexican connection of El Dringo and HJ60. The amber liquid flowed freely and the conversation was cheap. The pack was sent off into the wild blue yonder travelling to the far reaches of the suburbs. There were some shiggy to be found, much distance to be covered and no rehydration station to be found. The walkers travelled this way and that, the runners went in every direction only to be geographically embarrassed – finding their way home in dribs and drabs.

Meanwhile, back at the hacienda, the hydration situation was well and truly catered for. The trailer followed their every path to ensure that they were adequately hydrated.

Meanwhile, an afternoon feast was catered for the hungry hoard where a lot of 'little boys' came a-running, together with their 'jatz crackers'.

Raffle tickets were sold and prizes were won. Food consisting of snags and marinated chicken pieces were consumed by the hungry hoard, together with a huge quantity of the amber liquid. Not a tequila bottle was in sight – maybe for 'supper' when all and sundry vanished into the night. (Ed's words)

When an employment application asks who is to be notified in case of emergency, I always write, "A very good doctor"

I hate that feeling after surgery when you're not sure if you're awake or asleep or if you operated on the right patient.

You were so ugly when you were born the doctor threw you out the window and the window threw you back.

When I was born, the doctor came out to the waiting room and said to my father, "I'm very sorry. We did everything we could. But he pulled through."

Q: How are enemas and divorces alike?

A: At first, they are both pretty crappy but in the long run they feel pretty good!

Q: How do you tell the difference between an oral thermometer and a rectal thermometer?

A: By The taste.

Traditions:

S.H.I.T.S now boasts 3 traditions, which have been upheld successfully.

1. You will never drink alone.
2. What you cannot drink goes on your head and not on the floor!
3. Whenever possible, we will have a sitting circle.
